THE SOCIETY OF THE DESCENDANTS OF NORMAN FOX

THE FAMILY SOCIETY

"It is accounted one of God's blessings to man that he setteth the solitary in families. But if the relations of parent and child, brother and sister, minister increased well-being, it is wise that cousins and distant kindred recognize and cherish their family unity. The clan - one of the early developments of civilization - is an institution which may still have uses. .....

No man can demand the world's homage by right of his pedigree; nevertheless he should himself cherish a reverence for his ancestors and may glory in their virtues though they live but unnoticed lives. Respect for the name he bears will tend to restrain a young man in the hour of temptation, and he may strive the harder to act well his part in life from remembering that others will feel a pride in his laurels. A family is honorable, not in the name it inherits but in the determined purpose of each generation to make that name ever more worthy of respect. A proper regard for one's lineage will incite to better service to the world at large.

Such are the principles which have led to this organization of the children, grandchildren and great-grand-children of Norman Fox. And may they with those that follow them succeed in making broader the grounds on which they find reason to rejoice in the circle to which they belong."

Norman Fox (1836-1907)

One of the greatest monuments to the genius of Norman Fox is the incorporated family society known as the "Society of the "Society of the Descendants of Norman Fox." A membership corporation was formed on 27 May 1904 by six trustees representing the families of the six children of Norman Fox. The original trustees as named in the articles of incorporation were: "Norman Fox, Jr. of Morristown, New Jersey, William Freeman Fox of Albany, New York, Elixabeth Fox MacArthur and George Henry Fox of the city of New York and Alan Fox and George Henry Fox (2nd) of Detroit, Michigan."

On December 26th, 1904 a meeting was held at the MacArthur's home, 358 West 57th Street, for the purpose of organization. At this meeting a constitution was adopted and officers elected. Norman Fox was unanimously chosen President; William Freeman Fox, Vice President; Gertrude MacArthur, Secretary; Alanson Fox, Treasurer, and Noel Fox, Curator.

During the early years, annual meetings were held on the evening of January 1st at a New York City hotel. That date gave way to one during more favorable weather. Since the 1960's, the Society has met on the 3rd Saturday in June at the homes of its members. A grant 75th reunion attended by over eighty members took place in 1979 at the Gideon Putnam in Saratoga Springs, New York.

Business matters are conducted with dignity and decorum as befit this illustrious clan and conclude with dispatch to permit ample time for the exchange of family news and the perennial discussion of The Role of the Associates (spouses). For years the Associates (without whom there would be no family) have sought voting rights - to no avail.

At the annual meeting in 1914, Mason Trowbridge spoke as follows: "I dislike to bring a note of discord into the harmony of this occasion. I do not like to drag from the closet the family skeleton and seat it at this feast. But as long as the cause to which four years ago tonight I dedicated my life, my fortune and my sacred honor is still unrecognized, I must seize this opportunity on behalf of the associates; for it is the only opportunity throughout the year when they are given a chance to be heard. I refer, Sir, to the unjust and iniquitous provision in the Constitution of the Society by which the associate members are excluded from all participation in its government. In order that you may understand that I do not merely voice the sentiments of the younger hot-heads, but express those of many who have for years endured this wrong in silence, I am going to read a poem, written, I understand, by either Aunt Cornelia or Aunt Annie and which is appropriately entitled:

JUSTICE.

Upon the morn of New Year's day,
In each succeeding year,
The Foxes hold a conference
And come from far and near.
Pursuant to the by-laws stern
Which govern their Society,
Those members only have a vote
Of the direct descent variety.
They are the ones who frame the laws
Which strictly bind us all,
And by their arbitrary rules
The associates enthrall.

If any daughter, still unwed,
Within the previous year,
Has met her fate and to his suit,
Has lent a willing ear;
She may not of herself decide
That she will be his mate,
But to this meeting must submit
The name of candidate.

And none in all the family
May join the marriage state,
And bring to the Society
A new Associate,
Without she first obtain consent
Of Uncle George, our President.
And let no one of you here think
That this is a formality,
The Secret minutes would disclose
Full many a fatality.

They say that after three rebuffs
One poor despairing cousin,
The fourth time gave the family
Their choice amongst a dozen;
And when they had selected one,
An unsuspecting swain,
She then went out and married him
By eminent domain.

And so this morning while you met
In annual communion,
We held a great mass meeting
At historic Cooper Union.
From every quarter of the land
Associates were there,
The author of these verses came
And occupied the chair.

Amidst the throng were maidens,
Each angry in her soul,
Who had won the hearts of Alan,
Alanson, Howard and Noel
But had failed to win the ballot
At this wretched family poll.

Our Uncle Robert pledged support
By cable from Siam,
From Tulsa, Nellie telegraphed
"A bas the Sydenham."

Now many plans were there discussed
And some were for a "hike,"
And some proposed that at this feast
We try a hunger strike.

While some with stronger appetites
Cried "Here's a wiser plan,
We'll put the Foxes in a hole
By eating all we can."
But on one thing we all agreed
And pledged us each to each,
We would not one of us, if asked,
Consent to make a speech."

In 1979, Edward Neighbors, sire of five Fox members, furthered the cause of the Associates by coining a rallying slogan which emblazoned on large round lapel pins proclaimed "You Owe It All To US!" The cause continues -

Since one of the objectives of the Society is to preserve family papers, records, etc., it seems appropriate to reprint the words to the Descendant's Song and Our Creed.

DESCENDANT'S SONG

(Tune: Seit Vater Noah)

In seventeen hundred and ninety-two--
Let us all remember the year!
An event occurred, not uncommon, 'tis true,
Which explains the fact that we're here.
At Hoosick Falls, New York, sir,
The old ancestral stork, sir,
Delivered a box
For a party named Fox,
The parental abode to cheer.

Jehiel, the father, was godly and bold,
Jerusha, the mother, was fair;
Their wealth consisted of virtues untold,
Which all of their progeny share.
And so on New Year's Day, sir,
We love to make a display, sir,
Of wit and sobriety,
Mischief and piety,
Dower of an honored forebear.

When all meet here at the dawn of each year,
In the Fox genealogy versed,
Our great ancestor to proudly revere.
As we banish our hunger and thirst,
To the S. of the D. of N.F., sir,
Our aqua Crotonis we'll quaff, sir,
And mingle in glee,
'Neath the family tree,
That was planted by Norman the First.

Jan. 1st, 1908 G.H.F.

OUR CREED

(Tune: The Dutch Compan-ee)

A worthy old ancestor, one Thomas Fox by name,
In Sixteen-hundred-thirty-two to Massachusetts came,
And there he wrought good deeds but the best we all agree
Was transplanting in America our great family tree.

Oh! the Fox famil-ee is the best famil-ee
That ever came over across the briny sea.

We're not a bit exclusive, just modest and select,
"Associates" we've taken in and treat with high respect,
They're very hard to please and on Suffrage now are bent
Though with such a happy lot as theirs they should be content
For the Fox famil-ee etc.

Our muster roll is swelling and new names oft appear
And when the little Foxes come they're greeted with a cheer,
The vines they spoil are naught to the wealth of joy they bring
And as soon as they can lisp a note they all learn to sing,

Oh! the Fox famil-ee etc.

Jan. 1st, 1912.

As can be noted in the Constitution, there are seven Trustees representing the seven branches of the family, six from the descendants of Norman and one from the descendants of Alanson, Norman's brother. The Trustees elect the officers.

PREFACE

It is a matter of regret that all intelligent families of America do not make a permanent record of their ancestors and living relatives. Some have a few genealogical notes tucked away in places where they can rarely be found when wanted and which eventually find their way to the furnace or some unknown place. But the majority know little and care less about their family history.

A full and accurate family record placed in all of our public libraries would be of great value a hundred years hence and if such a record is not made NOW it will then be unobtainable. What a blessing it would have been if one or two centuries ago our ancestors had made and preserved a full and accurate family history! What a blessing it will be to our descendants of one or two centuries to come if we do this now!

Why can not every family select as its official genealogist some member with spare time and interest in the work and who by a study of various Court and Church records and by correspondence with distant cousins might compile and publish such a family record?

An elaborate volume with portraits and colored coats of arms may serve to impress a few readers but such a book is expensive and unnecessary. Typewritten or printed family sheets, bound in a loose-leaf octavo pamphlet with a flexible cover, would cost but little and being acceptable to all public libraries would serve the main purpose of perpetuating the family history.

Whoever is able to make additions or corrections to this family record is earnestly requested to send such to the compiler.

George Henry Fox, M.D.

New York, New York

is convenient for reference as it shows at a glance the various lines of descent and enables one to find any adult son. The sons who died young are omitted as are also the daughters all of whom will be found in the family sheets.

NOTE II

THE FAMILY NUMBERING

is unusual but very convenient. If ---- ---- e.g. is numbered 1 3 5 it shows that he is in the third generation and is the fifth son of the third son of the first American ancestor as far as known. Omitting one or two right hand figures gives the number of his father or grandfather.

The daughters are lettered A B C etc.

Thomas Fox of Concord was made a freeman in 1644 and was therefore born as early as 1623 for it was not until 1645 that a man under twenty-one years of age could be made a freeman. It is probable that he was born about 1619 and that he married his first wife Rebecca about 1641. He appears to have been a man who stood well among his neighbors and was evidently educated above the average. Although "feeble and weak in body" he signed his will with his own hand, his name being neat and legible. His descendants may be congratulated that their first ancestor in America did not have to make his X mark.

The coat-of-arms impressed on the seal of his will is entirely unlike that of the Rev. John Foxe, the martyrologist, is whom some have claimed to have been his ancestor. The arms on the will seem identical with those of the family of the Rev. Peter Bulkeley with whom he was evidently in close friendship and as The Rev. Edward Bulkeley signed the will as a witness and not unlikely drew the will itself, as was the custom of many of the early clergy, it is probable that he used his own seal.

The will, dated 1658, now in Middlesex Co. office made his wife Hannah executrix. She and her young sons Thomas, Samuel and John moved to New London, Ct. where she became the third wife of Andrew Lester and had three sons by him, Timothy 1662, Joseph 1664 and Benjamin Lester 1666 (half-brothers of the children of Thomas Fox of Concord) and later married a third husband. (See "Thomas Fox and his Descendants" by William F. Fox with preface by Simeon M. Fox.)

David was a soldier in the Phipps Expedition to Quebec and probably never went to New London, Isaac moved there from Medford after 1695. That the son Thomas died young is conjecture. He and his sister Hannah were certainly in New London in 1662 as is shown by County Court records. He may have gone to Newport where a Thomas Fox lived or have been one of the unidentified Thomas Foxes of Boston.

As the first Thomas Fox was a brother-in-law of Moses Wheate it is very likely that his first wife was Rebecca Wheate. Possibly she was a sister of Wheate's wife Tamasin. He probably married her in England but possibly a sister Rebecca of Moses Wheate came with his family and married Thomas Fox in Concord.

It should be noted that there were two men named Thomas Fox who lived in Concord soon after its settlement.

The elder one of these, as is shown by various Court records, came from England to America in one of the vessels of Gov. Winthrop's fleet in 1630. He was one of Gov. Cradock's men and probably settled on the Mystic river near where Medford now stands and where Gov. Winthrop located the Cradock grant. Gov. Cradock never came to America but sent over a colony of servants. It seems quite certain that this was the Thomas Fox, b c1608, who later moved to Cambridge and is know as "Thomas Fox of Cambridge" in distinction from the younger "Thomas Fox of Concord". He was made a freeman in 1638. The Cambridge Church records state that his son Jabez had been baptized at Concord. He evidently had an unidentified wife there and after removal to Cambridge married (2) Ellen, widow of Percival Green.

Each of these men named Thomas Fox, as well as Richard Fox of Glastonbury, Ct. has a distinct line of widely scattered descendants. They may possibly have been related to each other but proof of this is lacking.

PREFACE

In the fifty years since George Henry Fox, M.D. wrote the Preface to "Thomas Fox of Concord, Mass." and the other four books of genealogical records, many members past and present have contributed their time in maintaining the family records.

Three members, however, merit special recognition for the outstanding contributions they made to The Society of the Descendants of Norman Fox and to the Family as a whole. To them this revision is lovingly dedicated.

Noel Bleecker Fox, 1878-1972, family historian and expert on the military careers of Fox ancestors, contributed regularly to the annual gathering of the clan keeping young and old aware and proud of this illustrious family.

Clinton Fox Ivins, 1887-1975, planned to bring up-to-date the family records and publish a formal account, but his efforts were interrupted by a disabling stroke in 1971 from which he never recovered.

Howard Brooks Freeman, 1889-1965, served the Society as Secretary, Vice-President and member of the Board of Trustees and was a meticulous chronologist and authority on Fox-Freeman genealogy.

NOTE I

is unusual but very convenient. If ---- ---- e.g. is numbered 1 3 5 it shows that he is in the third generation and is the fifth son of the third son of the first American ancestor as far as known. Omitting one or two right hand figures gives the number of his father or grandfather.

The daughters are lettered A B C etc.

(George Henry Fox, M.D.)

In updating the "Descendants of Jehiel Fox" it was thought best to adopt another numbering system to include all female descendants. The system used by George Henry Fox will continue through those descendants included in the 1931 edition. However, for consistency Jehiel Fox has been numbered 1; his children 2, 3, 4, etc. All descendants have been given Arabic numbers to avoid confusion with the original system, which used Roman numerals to designate generations. As the lines continue, grouped into Chapters by generation, the old numbering system has been dropped.

(Diane D. Ivins)

NOTE II

Wherever mentioned:

Chester, New York is now Chestertown in Warren County
(New) Canaan, New York is Canaan in Columbia County
Sandy Hill is Hudson Falls
Queensburg should be Queensbury now Glens Falls, New York

Jehiel Fox - A Pioneer Preacher by Norman Fox 1836-1907
(Reprinted from The Fox Family News of July 1, 1913)

Among the Baptist ministers of a hundred years ago in the circle of the old Shaftesbury Association a place of honor was held by JEHIEL FOX.

He was born in 1762 in East Haddam, Ct., removing in boyhood with his father to Canaan, now in Columbia County, New York. All four of his older brothers were soldiers in the Revolutionary Army and at the age of nineteen he himself enlisted in a militia regiment marching to the relief of New London when Arnold was harrying that region. After his return home he taught school at Whiting's Pond and here married Jerusha, daughter of Capt. Hezekiah Baldwin of the Revolutionary Army, who also had served under Lord Howe at Ticonderoga in the old French War. In 1788 he removed to Hoosack.

Here he began to preach. Among the Fox family papers in his "License", reading as follows:-

Hoosack, January 11th 1794

To Wohme yt may Concern.
These may Certify that the bearer here of Jehiel Fox is a member of the Baptist Church of Christ in old Hoosack and is in good standing with us and from the oppertunity we have had we have gained a Comfortable hope that he has a Call from the Lord to preach the gospel of Christ. We therefore freely Recommend him as Such and wish our Sister Churches to improve him for their own Satisfaction.

Signed by order of the Church
John Waldo Deacon.

Though the spelling of the document is a trifle labored it is engrossed in the legible hand writing of the gentlemen of a hundred years ago. The young preacher, returning once to the place where he had been brought up and thus would be "without honor," challenged criticism by a discourse from the text, - "What will this babbler say?"

In 1797 he removed to Chester in what then was Washington but now is Warren County, in the region to the west of Lake George. The district around what is now Oneida County was the Far West of that time and was attracting many settlers but it was said by some to be less healthy than the northern region. In his new location he opened a store, built a saw mill and engaged in other operations, becoming the leading business man of the neighborhood. But he still felt the "Woe is me if I preach not the gospel" and under his labors a group of disciples was soon gathered and a church was organized.

It is an interesting picture of Baptist church life of a century ago which is given in the faded records from which I copy as follows:-

"At a Conference appointed for that Purpose a Number of Brethren and Sisters Met at the House of Jehiel Fox June 17th 1797 - and after Prayer to Almighty God for direction Wisdom and Grace on this important occasion - 1st Proceeded to Inquire is it the Duty of Christians to Maintain Visible Religion in all its Extensive Branches. answd in the affirmative. 2ly are our Numbers Local Situation and Circumstances such as would render it Expedient Justifyable and duty to Indeavour to be agreed in Doctrine Discipline and Worship and as a Church of Christ to be Organized and as such to maintain all the Laws - ordinances and Institutions of Christ's House. Ansd in the affirmative. 3ly Read to Consideration the general articles of faith and practice of the Baptist Denomination in America and Europe."

* * * * * *

We finally come to this important record:-

"Oct. 4th 1797. Agreeable to Request the following Churches met in council by their Elders and Delegates at the house of Jehiel Fox (viz) from the first Church in Hartford (Washington County). Elder Amasa Brown & Brn Levi Gates, & Saml Downs, from the 2nd Church in Hartford Elder Gamaliel Barnes & from Battenkill (Greenwich) Deacon Robert Kinyon & Nathaniel Perkins."

"After reading the Letters sent to and the answers of the Several Chr (the churches at Stillwater and Mapletown had also been invited) and the Brethren of this Church manifesting their Satisfaction in the Council Convened Proceeded and Chose Elder Brown Moderator and Levi Gates Scribe and after solemn Prayer to God for his Direction the Council Proceeded to examine the Articles of Faith which Chester Brethren had forced and Enquired into their standing. 2nd. Examined the call of the Church to the Candidate then to be set apart to the work of the Ministry. And after Sundry questions Relative to his Doctrinal and Practical Sentiments Retired and after Serious Deliberation. 4ly Voted to give the Church the Right hand of fellowship. 5ly voted to ordain the Candidate and to proceed as follows (viz) Elder Brown to preach the Sermon, Elder Barnes to make the ordaining prayer, Elder Brown and Elder Barnes to Lay Hands, Elder Brown to give the Charge, Elder Barnes to give the right hand of Fellowship and Deacon Robert Kinyon to make the concluding prayer - the Whole Being attended to with the Greatest Solemnity Decency & good order May God Bless the Proceeding Amen."

That council was not a large one, for the apostles summoned thereto had to come by a two or three days horseback journey over primitive roads through the wilderness. No newspaper reporters were present but in after years the candidates youngest son, then but five years of age, told how he, with the other children was sent up into the "Loft" where he lay on his stomach and looked down through the opening on the strange and impressive scene. The old log house which was a large one for that day was of course filled by the solemn assembly. The spacious fireplace which set back from the main room like the apse of a cathedral was swept out and hung with green boughs. The officiating elders sat within the recess while before it was a table at which the candidate knelt to receive the solemn imposition of hands "where through the long drawn aisle and fretted vault the pealing anthem swells the notes of praise". Was ceremonial ever attended with greater "Solemnity, decency and good order."

Elder Fox served this church as Pastor for over a quarter of a century and until his death. He preached also at outstations ten and twenty miles away, the history of the Shaftesbury Association naming half a dozen churches established by him. He drew his support from his own labors rather than from the gifts of the church and members living at a distance were enabled to enjoy gospel privileges by being welcomed to his house to stay from Saturday till Monday. He did laborious apostolic service, making his way to his appointments over mountain ridges, fording rapid and dangerous streams, threading his way by blazed trees through the forests haunted by wolf and panther. He was moreover a man of mental activity and clear thought as it shown by his sketches of sermons and other documents among the family papers. Though not college trained he could not properly be termed an uneducated preacher for he successfully availed himself of all opportunities for study which came to his hand. His appreciation of scholastic culture is revealed in his sending his youngest son to the old Granville Academy and to Union College giving him exceptional advantages for that day. A leader in commercial, religious and intellectual life, he was the patriarch of the neighborhood.

When a little past sixty he had a stroke which paralyzed the muscles of the throat so that he was unable to swallow though the vocal cords were not affected and he could speak. The story comes down of his sitting in his arm chair, the windows being open in the July evening, while many were leaning on the fence outside, he preached to them and said "My neighbors have come together to see me die. For I am starving to death. But I have meat to eat that ye know not of, I have faith to believe that I shall pass over Jordan dry shod. Tell the dear brethren and sisters that Elder Fox has gone home." And so to the last he gave his testimony till still sitting in the old arm chair he passed away.

The inscription on his tombstone, prepared by himself excepting the date of his death, reads, - "The Revd Jehiel Fox passes this way from the labors of the field and vineyard to his Master. Lo! grace gives the triumph. Born 21st Aug. 1762. Expired July 25, 1823". On his wife's tombstone are the words, - "Beneath this stone the remains of Mrs. Jerusha Fox await the ressurrection trump. Born Sept. 9th. 1760. Expired 2d Sept. 1819".

He had been succeeded in the ministry by a son and grandson. At the ordination of the latter at Whitehall, N. Y. his father giving the "Charge to the Candidate" presented to him the bible from which his grandfather had preached. And one of the great grandsons of Jehiel Fox expects to take up the patriarch's work."

That Jehiel Fox was a man of individuality, having his own way of thinking and not enslaved by his environment, may be indicated by the fact that though in his day parents gave each infant a Bible name he called his own children, Alanson, Solyman, Norman, Selina and Sophia.

The year after his wife's death he was married again. His second consort was a worthy woman but his children were not pleased at the alliance.

He, his first wife and his two older sons were buried in the old burying ground which was near the center of the village of Chester. In 1885 this was done away with and the bodies were re-interred in the new cemetery, a mile or so from the town.

Jehiel Fox in the Revolution by Noel Bleecker Fox 1878-1972

(Reprinted from The Fox Family News of March, 1916)

Our great grandfather, Jehiel Fox, served in the militia of two states during the Revolutionary War. His first service was in Connecticut as stated after his death by his brother, Gabriel Ely Fox, who said "Jehiel Fox went out as a substitute to New London in the militia - about 3 mo. - while living at Connect." Neither the regiment nor the date of this service is known and any further particulars which anyone can furnish will be most acceptable. It was probably about 1778, for Jehiel Fox had been born at East Haddam, Conn., in 1762 and in the spring of 1779 he moved with his father to New York State, settling at Canaan, which was then in that part of Albany County called "Kings District" but is now in Columbia County. There he enlisted in the Seventeenth Regiment of Albany County Militia, which was raised in the Kings District under the command of Colonel William Bradford Whiting.

In the State Library at Albany we find in "Audited Accounts, Volume A", at page 62, a reference to "Col. W.B. Whiting's Regt. of Militia order'd on alarm to Schenectady under the immediate command of Lieut. Col. Asa Waterman for the defence of the United States from 11th to 23d October 1781 both days included". That Jehiel Fox performed this duty as a private in Captain Elijah Bostwick's company is shown by the pay roll of the company in "Certificates of Treasurer, Volume II", at page 63. In that list his name is spelled "Hiel Fox" and we cannot tell whether it is a clerical error or whether he was known by that abbreviation to his friends and neighbors. The figures opposite his name showing the amount of his pay for that service were partly burned when the State Library was destroyed a few years ago but the other privates whose entries appear in full received each £1, 1s, 1d.

This regiment was ordered out on other occasions also but its muster rolls for those were partially or wholly burned with the State Library and as Jehiel Fox's name does not appear in any of the fragments preserved we cannot tell what active service he performed except that already mentioned. The identity of our great grandfather with that "Heil Fox" has been deemed by the Sons of the Revolution in the State of New York as sufficiently proved to entitle his descendants to membership in that society.

In one of his writings Uncle William said that Jehiel Fox served with the Seventeenth Albany Regiment on a march to New London in 1781. I can find no other authority to show that this regiment made such an expedition and it seems improbable that it was sent so far away while border warfare in Northern New York was so acute. I am inclined to regard that statement as a mistake caused by confusing the two regiments in which Jehiel Fox served.

Jehiel Fox's four older brothers, Reuben, Hubbard, Allen and Ansel all served in the Revolution having enlisted in Connecticut before their father moved to New York. Of these Ansel was killed in the battle of Monmouth, Hubbard was at Monmouth and Valley Forge and Allen, after a long service received a certificate of honorable discharge signed by Washington and Adjutant General Trumbull and stating that he had received the "Badge of Merit".

RECOLLECTIONS OF MY FATHER By George Henry Fox (1846-1915)

(Reprinted from the Fox Family News of January 1, 1912)

My father was 54 years old when I was born, the youngest of seven. I have been told that on this important occasion the older children were entertained by various kind neighbors. When my brother Norman came home, and was allowed to gaze at his new and dimunitive brother he is said to have burst into tears at the thought of what he had missed, remarking that he had seen several weddings but had never been to a borning.

In my first distinct recollection of my father I see him standing with his feet apart and hands behind him, while conversing with a gentleman at our house in Ballston. I tugged at his knee to attract attention and asked if I could go out and roll my little wheel-barrow as far as Mr. Beach's Corner. He looked down at me and quietly remarked, "I've no objection." My vocabulary at that time did not include many words of three syllables, but I remember how I interpreted his language through the kind indulgent look upon his face.

When I was four years old the family moved to Schenectady. Household goods were doubtless shipped by rail but the cow was driven over by my brother Norman to our new home, in what I believe is still called the "Bowery" near the end of the pine woods. My father took Elizabeth and me with him in his buggy behind our old black horse and about sundown we overtook Norman and the cow trudging along the dusty road just outside of the city. Father now got out and drove the cow while Norman doubtless with a glad heart took his place in the buggy. Very soon the latter called our attention to the new home, "a white house with pillars in front." I remember looking in vain for a house with pillows in the upper windows.

From the Bowery we moved to a brick house on Liberty street near the Methodist church and later to half of a double brick house on Ferry street. Our landlord, a fine old octogenarian resided next door and was known to us children as "Old Poppy Vedder." Our first floor was almost level with the street and when a front pane of glass became loosened he applied the necessary putty from the outside. Elizabeth and I became intensely interested in his work from the inside of the pane and watched the wind tossing his scanty white locks and the peculiar twisting of his lips over his toothless jaws, with gleeful emotions. We were endeavoring to imitate or to surpass his facial contortions when my brother William arrived at the house, and by his manifest approval of our performances encouraged us to more vigorous effort. Just then my father appeared on the scene. The performance ended, and the curtain literally fell. I cannot recall that the performers felt any great sense of shame or repentance, but I know that my father took us into another room, and for a long time talked to us with a singularly impressive kindness about the thoughtlessness of children and the respect which should ever be shown to old age. Lest the reader imagine that I was spoiled through any sparing of the rod, I might cite a back yard disagreement with my sister Elizabeth in whch my crowning argument was accompanied by a vicious kick. I was unaware that my father was just then viewing our discussion from a rear window. I think the rod used in this case was of plum instead of birch, but it "got there all the same."

I can distinctly recall the many times when, as a little boy, I climbed up into my father's lap, and begged or perhaps demanded of him to draw something on my slate, or to tell me a Bible story. I can recall no instance of a refusal. Even to this day I can feel the thrills of pleasure with which I listened to the stories of the boy David, carrying parched corn and loaves to his brothers in camp, of the widow's cruse of oil and of Elijah's chariot of fire. One night in Paris I listened to the opera of Samson. I had almost forgotten the story, but when the blind old man was led in by a little boy to the great pillars I entirely forgot the music and almost cried aloud, "There is the little boy that my father used to tell me about."

When somewhat older and called upon to speak a piece at school, I often asked my father to select one for me, and always rehearsed it before him. One day he surprised me by offering to speak a piece for me, and standing up he recited verse after verse from the Greek Testament. One day in college our class was struggling with the story of the Pool of Bethesda when the phrase "aron ton krabbaton" sounded so familiar that I was almost overwhelmed with the recollection that these words were in the piece that my father used to speak.

In his later years at the Gang Mills near Painted Post, he took great interest in tree planting and in gardening. He read the horticultural catalogues to any of us who would listen, and we noted the fact that every variety was described as "large and fine." At the end of the family table my father usually sat in silence, apparently oblivious of the fun that was generally going on. Whenever a dessert was served that seemed unusually appetizing some one was always ready to remark in an undertone, "large and fine." During the war our soldier boys had to live on scant and short rations. One day when some peculiarly toothsome dish was brought to the table my father remarked that if William and Charles were here they would say that this was "large and fine," showing that he had noticed more of what was said and done at our table than any of us had imagined.

The unusual difference between my father's age and mine did not tend to an intimate companionship and naturally, I was unable to appreciate his rare and admirable qualities as did my older brothers. While these rambling recollections may be of little value, I truse my gentle reader may find in them a certain amount of interest.

Norman Fox 1792-1863 By Norman Fox, Jr. (1836-1907)

(Reprinted from the Fox Family News of May 1, 1914)

NORMAN FOX, son of Jehiel and Jerusha (Baldwin) Fox, was born at Hoosick, N.Y. September 17th, 1792, the family removing in 1797 to Chester, in what is now Warren Co.

His classical education was pursued at Granville Academy, the principal of which was Salem Town, LL. D. whose spelling book and other educational works made him widely known in the earlier half of the last century. Bright young men were drawn to his instructions, one of Fox's schoolmates being Samuel Nelson, afterwards a Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States.

In 1813 he entered Union College at Schenectady where Eliphalet Nott had not long before begun the half century term of service which makes him remembered as one of the greatest of the college presidents of the United States. The buildings "on the hill" had not been erected, the institution occupying the old "West College" now taken down. When it was used by the Union School his children found one day in the belfry his name which he had cut in the woodwork half a century before. During his Sophomore year, on the death of his brother Solyman, he was called home by his father to assist in business affairs and did not return to complete his course.

When the British made their invasion at Plattsburgh he went as Ensign in one of the regiments of militia which marched thither to take part in the defence. The detachment did not reach Plattsburgh till the battle was over though they got within sound of the firing and were present the next day at the ceremonial of the burial of Downey, the British commander. The members of the regiment were afterwards given land warrants and pensions. Later he held other positions in the militia up to the rank of Lieutenant Colonel, his commissions making an interesting array of autographs of earlier governors of New York.

With his older brother Alanson he engaged in commercial operations. It was not easy to make business profitable in those days. There was next to no specie in circulation, so that the merchant had to part with his goods for farm produce or whatever else the customer could offer and it required great labor and close calculation to turn this into money or manageable property. It was not easy to get rich then any more than now. The brothers however carried on successfully a large business for that time. They were especially prominent in lumber manufacturing, introducing new methods of operation.

He also engaged quite extensively in politics. He was an adherent of the party of Jefferson and Jackson, then called the Republican party. For four years in the Legislature of New York he represented Washington County, and Warren, after the latter was set off therefrom. He also served as one of the Judges of the county court. He was nominated for the legislature three other years in which he was defeated. One of the candidates opposed to him was Judge William Hay of Glens Falls and afterwards of Saratoga Springs, long a prominent member of the bar of northern New York. The old newspapers reveal the fact that there was fierce excitement and intense bitterness, at least of language, in the politics of that day.

An especial service in the legislature which he rendered to his constituents was the securing of the passage of a law making navigable the Glens Falls feeder of the Champlain Canal. A public dinner was given him at Glens Falls in recognition of his successful exertions.

But other than business and political interests began to demand his thought. When approaching thirty years of age he made a profession of religion and united with the Baptist church of which his father had been so long Pastor. He was made clerk of the church and afterwards a deacon and in the absence of a regular minister he sometimes conducted the church services. The brethren urged him to take position formally as a preacher but for a long time he declined to do so. In the Legislature an attempt was made to unseat him on the ground that he was a Minister of the Gospel and thus under the Constitution then in force, ineligible to civil office. The committee appointed to consider the matter reported in his favor (Document No. 376, in Assembly, April 2nd, 1830) but on the 16th of March 1831, he was formerly ordained to the ministry and though nearly forty years of age entered on a new career. He retired so completely from politics as never even to vote during all the time that he was pastor of a church, thinking that he could exert a greater moral influence even in civic affairs if he held himself entirely aloof from party affiliations. After retirement from the ministry he voted again.

He served as pastor of the Adamsville church for three years, of the Kingsbury church three years, and twelve years (1838 to 1850) in Ballston Spa, at the end of which time ill health forbade his continuing longer in active ministry. He was a man of saintliness, commanding the respect of the world, while members of his flock spoke his name with the bated breath of the profoundest reverence. He was a preacher of ability, many of his discourses, for instance his sermon at Ballston Spa on the death of Andrew Jackson, creating a deep impression. A great many were baptized by him on profession of their faith.

He was a man of practical sagacity as well as pious intentions and thus he did blessed work as a peace maker. In the days of his earlier ministry the Baptist churches of the region were distracted by the controversy regarding Free Masonry, congregations being rent in twain and rival organizations established. The church at Kingsbury had been thus divided and there were two conflicting bodies. But he commanded so general a respect that each congregation was willing to make him its pastor and thus being at the head of both parties he was at last able to bring them together again as one. There were also two Associations covering the same territory, the Washington and Bottskill, divided on the same issue. After a time, however, he and a few broad minded men succeeded in bringing together the conflicting bodies and at a convention of which he was the Moderator, there was formed the Washington Union Association of the present day, the second word in the title of which is a historic trace of that old controversy now happily forgotten.

When approaching sixty years of age he was obliged to resign his pastorate and give up continued work in the ministry. He suffered from a cancerous growth in his cheek which was removed by a noted surgeon, Dr. Alden March of Albany. This recurred later and while it did not cause his death, it doubtless shortened his days.

After giving up the labors of the ministry he engaged once more in the lumber business. With William Anglin of Kingston, Canada, he built and conducted under the firm name of Fox and Anglin, a large establishmnet at Brewer's Mills, and with Isaiah Blood of Ballston Spa and O. M. Bond of Sandy Hill, under the name Blood, Bond and Co., another at Kingston Mills, both on the Rideau Canal. With Higbie, Hammond & Co. of Albany he engaged in lumber manufacturing at York in Canada, west of Buffalo, and he also built a large mill at Napanee, Canada. He also purchased the Gang Mills on the Tioga River near Painted Post, Steuben Co., N.Y., and with Abijah Weston and Carlos Bronson, his sons Alanson and Charles afterwards becoming members of the firm, under the name of Fox, Weston and Bronson, carried on a very extensive and profitable business. His remark was however, that if he could only regain his health he would give up all his business operations and engage in the ministry once more.

In his early life he was a great hunter and in after years his children used to be wonderfully entertained by his stories of deer hunting around Lake Brant and other districts in Warren County, and about the dogs which followed him. When upwards of fifty he went with a party into the wilderness of Hamilton County and the deer he brought out showed that the years had not impaired the keenness of his sight nor the steadiness of his hand.

In 1851 he removed from Ballston Spa to Schenectady and in 1860 to the Gang Mills where he died, October 3rd, 1863. He was buried at Painted Post but some years afterwards his remains were removed to Ballston Spa and laid beside the graves of his first wife and his daughter Adaline.

When he was in the Legislature at Albany two portraits of him, one on ivory and the other on card board were painted by George Catlin, a noted artist of that time.

Plattsburg, 1814-1914 By Noel Bleecker Fox (1878-1972)

(Norman Fox in the War of 1812, excerpts from the Fox Family News of July 1, 1914)

One of the most interesting incidents in the life of Norman Fox was his brief service in the War of 1812. In the year 1814 Major General Prevost, commanding 14000 British soldiers most of whom were veterans of the Napoleonic wars, invaded northern New York in cooperation with a British fleet on Lack Champlain under Commodore Downie. The Americans had at Plattsburg about 1500 regulars under Brig. Gen. Macomb and a fleet under Commodore Macdonough and the militia of the adjacent counties of New York and Vermont were called out to help repel the invasion.

At this time Norman Fox was living at Chester, Warren County, N.Y., and was not quite 22 years old. He enlisted as a private in Captain Salmon Farr, Jr.'s, company of the Twenty-third Regiment of New York Militia from Washington and Warren Counties and was mustered into the service of the United States on September 9th, 1814. The statement in the Fox Society booklet of 1906 and in the last number of the News (page 13) that he was an officer in the war is wrong although in later years he held commissions in the same regiment. The regiment had no uniforms but Norman Fox carried his own flintlock musket and his mother made him a knapsack.

In the meantime the invading army on September sixth occupied Plattsburg where their advance was checked by the Americans who were intrenched on South bank of the Saranac River. The British then waited for the assistance of their fleet which arrived on the eleventh. By that time the Americans had been reenforced by 3200 militia from Vermont and from Clinton and Essex Counties of New York but the militia from Washington and Warren Counties had not yet arrived.

On September eleventh the British fleet attacked the American ships in Cumberland Bay off Plattsburg while at the same time the British army attempted to force a crossing of the Saranac. The result of the naval battle was the surrender of the four larger British vessels and the flight of the smaller ones. Commodore Downie was among the killed. On shore the attack of the British army was repulsed at Plattsburg village although on account of their superior numbers their right wing succeeded in crossing the river at a ford three miles from its mouth. When Gen. Prevost learned of the American naval victory he lost hope of success and after dark he commenced a retreat towards Canada with such haste that he left behind his wounded and much of his supplies.

The Twenty-third New York Regiment, which was hastening by forced marches to reenforce Macomb's army, did not reach Plattsburg until the British had retreated. The tradition in our family says that Norman Fox was near enough on the day of the battle to hear the firing in the distance and that after reaching Plattsburg his regiment helped bury the dead. He was present at the burial in the Plattsburg Cemetery of Commodore Downie and the other officers killed on both sides. After the British were again in Canada and the danger of invasion over, the militia was sent home and Norman Fox's service ended on September twentieth.

On March 22nd 1816, more than a year after the close of the war, Norman Fox was commissioned Adjutant in the same regiment, in 1822 Major and in 1823 Lieutenant Colonel. He resigned in 1824.

From the Archives

(as printed in the Fox Family News of July 1, 1921)

Just one month before his twenty-first birthday, the solemnity of coming of age so impressed Norman Fox that he felt it necessary to write a rhymed acrostic on his name, which in those days was a favorite form of literary effort. It is labelled "Juvenile Retrospect" and the melodious meter and rhythm plainly indicates that the writer might have become as distinguished in poetry as in the pulpit. The reference to Xenophon may seem a little far fetched but the necessity of the case evidently demanded it.

"Chester, August 17, 1813.

Now back to childhood's blissful sportive plays
Often I view the scenes of youthful days,
Roam o'er my youth that hence far hence is bourne
My days to trace and past enjoyments mourn
Ah me my fleeting younger years are gone
Never, ah never, never to return.

Farewell then youth I bid a long farewell
On sober manhood now I come to dwell,
Xenophon's wisdom shall my bosom swell."

About half a century later when age and physical pain had changed the current of his thoughts he wrote the following on a page in the Family Bible.

"Painted Post, September 17, 1862.

I am this day three score and ten years and I can truly say with one of old 'Few and evil have been the days of my life.'

Norman Fox"

The Bible belonging to Norman Fox is in the Museum of the Warrensburg Historical Society.

Recollections of "Mother Fox", Mary Ann Chapman Hale,
by Elizabeth Fox MacArthur
(From Jane Freeman Fox-Our Mother, Fox Family News, May 1912)

..."I distinctly remember when father taking George and me aside told the glad news that Auntie Hale, whom we had always known, was to come to brighten our home. For, "what is home without a mother," meant far more than the title of the popular song. I can truly say that the tidings imparted by father created emotions, although not as deep as might have been expected, for uppermost in our minds was the thought of attending a wedding for the first time, and what was better, the prospect of having all the wedding cake we could desire.

The next day we accompanied father to Ballston where the wedding was to take place at the house of her daughter, Mrs. Russell P Clapp. There we were permitted to witness the preparations for the wedding feast and participate to the extent of eating pieces of cake that "stuck to the bottom of the pan" also to certain portions of icing that adhered to the dishes. As to the manner of the latter, I leave to the imagination of any reader not too old to remember childhood days. Some one may remark that these are rather insignificant details to place on record, but they are the memories of a child, not a mature woman who might have been more interested in the marriage service than in culinary preparations.

"Mother Fox" as she is remembered by all the relatives, outlived my father many years, making her home with her daughter, Mrs. Clapp in Ballston. There she died in ripe old age surrounded by children and grandchildren and beloved by all who knew her. Of her it might truly be said, "she openeth her mouth with wisdom and in her tongue is the law of kindness." Her children arise up and call her blessed.

"Auntie" Powers by Helen Fox Trowbridge (1882-1970)
(Reprinted from the Fox Family News of Nov. 1, 1921)

It always comes as a surprise to me that my family looks blank at references to Auntie Powers. She looms up on the horizon of my childhood as a figure of antiquity in much the same class as Noah. I suppose that at the time she would have been in the prime of life had it not been for her delicate health, but she was the only older person with whom I was in intimate contact as a baby and she impressed me as being almost prehistoric. Her interests must really have been quite young when she took Alanson to the dog show as a very little boy and they became so interested that they stayed there all day.

My mother felt keenly her children's lack of a grandmother and Auntie Power's long visits on her trips back and forth from Florida did much to supply the want. She taught me to read and to recite the multiplication tables (though with no credit to her training in the latter branch). She also labored fruitlessly to make my hair curl over a long black stick. The portrait of her little daughter, Helen, now at 58th Street, shows more fortunate results. Mother was also always delighted to have Auntie Powers as a guest in the house in recognition of her many kindnesses to father and Aunt Libby when they were motherless children.

No objet d'art in a museum will ever impress me as being so desirable or of such artistic merit as did a little flexible gold fish which hung from Auntie Power's watch chain. It became as inseparable from her personality as her curls, shawl and knitting. I have a white, knitted bed spread, made of intricate squares, which she made for me over a course of several years and when she finished it she said: "Now you must be careful of this when you grow up," with the result that I keep it in the trunk with my wedding dress. It became an heirloom on the spot.

Toward the end of her life, Auntie Powers became very feeble and was bedridden much of the time. Our faithful Mary Kelly was very fond of her and would step into her room at every opportunity to adjust a window shade or hand her a drink. Aunty kept a little box by her side and she would always open it and say, "Here, Mary, is a quarter for pin money." Mary would thank her with real gratitude and replace the quarter by sleight of hand. It would keep up day after day, Aunty's slightly clouded mind happy under the sense of being under no obligation.

Letters from California 1848 and 1850 Charles James Fox

(Reprinted from the Fox Family Trumpet of July 1929)

A letter from Charles James Fox (1823-1870, nephew of Norman and father of Louise (Fox) Ivins), sent to his sister Mary (Fox) Wait from the ship "Crescent City" when going with the gold rush to California in 1848, contains the following:

"We had fine weather and a smooth sea until Sunday eve when the wind changed and for forty-eight hours we have the most severe gale the Crescent City had ever passed through. I witnessed a most exciting scene on Tuesday. The storm was at its height and it appeared as if all the Fiends of Ocean were on a spree. Our craft had shipped a number of heavy seas and it was impossible to cross the deck without the assistance of a rope or something on which to hold fast when a cry resounded through the ship of "Man overboard." I saw him distinctly as he rose upon the top of a mountain wave and the cry of despair that he uttered still rings in my ears. No officer on board volunteered a rescue and it seemed as if a boat could not live an instant. A young pilot from Boston sprang into the life-boat and as soon as thought three noble tars (who only wanted a leader) were at his side. And now quite as much anxiety was felt for those in the life-boat as for the drowning man nobly buffeting the waves. The boat would rise upon the top of a mountain wave and again be lost to view. It had taken our attention from the drowning man and on all sides was heard the cry "He has sunk to rise no more." But no! A breaker raises him and the chair to which he clings to our view. The life-boat nears him and for a moment not a sound is heard save the howling of the storm and then the cry "He is saved! He is saved!" and then three soul-stirring cheers were sent up, a token as it were of thanksgiving to Him who rules the storm."

In a later letter dated April 12th, 1850, he writes, "I should like to send you a bouquet of California wild flowers. I have a beautiful one upon the desk which I culled some ten miles from Francisco. Some parts of the country appear at present like a perfect flower garden. A person must see the different portions of California at all seasons of the year to have a correct idea of it. The same hills upon which I gathered my wild flowers, now covered with a beautiful green sward giving pasture to herds of cattle, in the month of July have appeared like perfect barrens. A few of the valleys and narrow strips upon the banks of the river may be cultivated but the little state of New Jersey is worth a dozen Californias in an agricultural point of view."

Alanson J. Fox - An Appreciation By Rev. Henry H. Stebbins

(Reprinted from the Fox Family News of July 1, 1912)

"What would you say of your Uncle Alanson?" I asked of my daughters, Katherine and Jane, in the course of our table talk on a recent Sunday evening. From one or the other of the girls I gathered the following, which I recorded on the pad I had provided myself with:

"I would say that among Uncle Alanson's marked characteristics was his well balanced judgment. He looked at matters from more than one point of view. He might be called a silent man. In business and in educational matters he was far-seeing. He was a man of unquestioned integrity. He built up his fortune in the good, old fashioned way - no flimflam, no watered stock methods".

"Uncle Alanson was domestic, very fond of his home. He was a very good conversationalist. He had a quiet sense of humor. He was unpretentious. He was a good story-teller. He was a man of simple habits. He was broad-minded, christian, loyal, very so, to his demonination, yet of catholic spirit."

"Uncle Alanson was a man of wide reading. Like others of the Fox family he always had with him some choice clippings. He had a very retentive memory. He was not a college graduate, yet he knew more than a good many graduates."

"Uncle Alanson inspired a certain deference. He was looked up to."

The above answers to my question I have given without the least attempt to set them in order. They were spontaneous, unstudied expressions and on that account it seems to me, are of greater value. They are the obvious impressions made upon those who were so fortunate as to know the man. And the better they knew him the more fortunate they were.

The first time I met Alanson Fox was when he came to our home in Plainfield, New Jersey, to be married to my sister. The word that above any other smote me as comprehensively descriptive of the man was "straightforwardness." And the longer I knew him tne more confirmed I was in my first conviction. Alanson Fox had the single eye of which the Bible speaks, in consequence of which his whole body was full of light. His faith was as far removed from either credulity, superstition or fancy, as the east is from the west. He insisted upon having a reason for the faith that was in him. He was fond of argument and far oftener than otherwise held his own in any discussion he engaged in. Doubtless it was a surprise to many that he was not a college bred man - he was so intellectual, so cultivated, so widely intelligent and so well read. The fact is, and it was a vast compensation for the lack of a collegiate career, he was possessed of his full share of that gray matter which is a distinctive quality of the Fox family. Alanson, while a man of firm convictions, believed in freedom of thought and speech. I well remember with what satisfaction he looked upon the Open Forum, or whatever it was called, where all Baptists of whatever shade of belief, could meet and wield a free lance in the arena of debate. And, whenever possible, he was in attendance.

Alanson was a much sought for man in religious, educational and other councils. His business head and business habit, his conscientious attention to details, his disposition and determination, as a director, to direct, his keen forsight, his rare sagacity, his thoroughness, his executive ability and his unswerving integrity, made him a most valuable counsellor. His death cast an unusual shadow upon all the trusts he had admitted to his care.....

Excerpts from Alanson Jehiel Fox by Norman Fox (1836-1907)
(Reprinted from the Fox Family News of July 1, 1915)

He was a business man of the highest type. He possessed not merely that commercial sagacity which secures as increase of property, but he had that instinctive sense of justice in trade which regards the rights and the interests of both parties to the transaction. He was a successful business man in a higher sense than that of making money for his own firm. He had the ability to devise transactions which would be for the benefit of his customer as well as himself. It may safety be asserted that no one with whom he had dealings ever suspected him of unfairness and one result was that when business was slack elsewhere, his mail was filled with orders, for buyers felt that he would look out for their interests as truly as for his own.

From earliest boyhood he had been thoughtful and conscientious and at Ballston in 1850 he made a profession of religion and was baptized. In the village church at Painted Post he was a leader, the main dependence of its pastor and brethren, and he served also as superintendent of the Sunday School in the school house near the mills. On removing to Detroit he united with the Woodward Avenue Baptist Church, serving as a member of its Board of Trustees and as a bible class teacher. In the affairs of the Michigan Baptist State Convention he took an active part and also in the operations of the Baptist brotherhood. He was one of the foremost laymen of the denomination.

He was active also in civic affairs. In any gathering of citizens or any public enterprise he was always a leader. He was interested in the business of the county being a member for several years of the Board of Supervisors and he was at different times urged to accept a nomination for Congress. Though the district was strongly Republican and he was a Democrat it was recognized that he could be elected, for large numbers of Republicans would have voted for him. His business activities however, forbade his acceptance of this office which others were willing to take.

His leadership among the citizens was especially noticeable during the war for the Union. No man in the country did more than he in support of the government in raising of troops and in looking after the interests of the soldiers in the field. His father had served in the war of 1812, his grandfather in the Revolution and his great grandfather in the Old French War, while of his four brothers one was Lieutenant Colonel and one Major in the 107th N.Y., and of the other two, one was a chaplain and one a private in the 77th N.Y. Though he could not himself take the field he rendered as effective service to the government as if he had himself been enrolled in the army ranks.

Though his formal educational course closed at the age of sixteen he continued habits of thought and study. He was a broad and thoughtful reader, his private library being large and especially well chosen, He wrote often for the press and his articles were always in effective style. He was an interesting and forcible speaker and on the political platform or at a war meeting or before a religious convention his addresses had great weight. He was a fine specimen of the educated business man. The oft discussed question whether a young man intending to enter commercial life should go through college is not simply the question whether a knowledge of Greek and Latin will help a man manufacture lumber or sell stocks; it recognizes that a man has relations to life outside his business affairs and that in his family circle, in his church and ecclesiastical assemblies, in civic life and in gatherings of his fellow citizens, a trained mind will make him a greater power in life. It was as such that he was called on to take a leading part in the administration of scholastic trusts.

He was a trustee of Vassar College, of the University of Rochester and of Kalamazoo College and was president of the Board of Trustees of the Rochester Theological Seminary.

In 1903 he came to New York to submit to a surgical operation for relief from a trouble from which he had suffered more or less for some time. His physicians considered that no great danger was involved in it but complications set in and after a fortnight of hopes and anxieties he passed away on the evening of October 29th.

At the home of his brother-in-law in New York was held a quiet gathering of his kindred and a very few intimate friends, the service being conducted by Dr. Edward Judson who had been a guest at his home. The more formal services were held in Detroit on Monday Nov. 2nd and were conducted by the Rev. Spencer B. Meeser D.D., pastor of the Woodward Avenue Baptist Church. Addresses were made by Prof. C. R. Henderson. D.D. of the University of Chicago, the pastor for man years of the Woodward Avenue Church, and by President A. H. Strong D.D. of the Rochester Theological Seminary. Borne by four brothers and two nephews he was buried in Woodmere Cemetery where were already laid three of his children: Little Joe who passed away in the beauty of his childhood, Julia who was called away just as she attained womanhood and Stuart who in early manhood was suddenly stricken down. There he rests, but though dust returns to dust, the true life never ends.

"Aunt Cornelia" By Jane B. Stebbins

(Reprinted from the Fox Family Trumpet of April 1929)

Sitting one day on the upper porch of Alan's house at Spuyten Duyvil I begged Aunt Cornelia to give me some reminiscences of her early days in New York and Brooklyn.

"My father lived in Newport, N.Y. where he married for the first time and was a Butter and Cheese Commission merchant. Later he moved to New York and lived in Attorney Street, where Henry, Gussie and I were born. Later we lived three or four years in Henry St. and then moved around the corner to Gouverneur St. My grandfather's half-sister, Aunt Harriet Hamlin always lived with us. She was very prim and precise with a bunch of curls over the side of each ear. She always wore silk - never liked anything but silk. She was married when much over fifty. Henry and I went to Mr. Littlefield's school in East Broadway and we attended the Broome St. Presbyterian Church of which father and mother were pillars. Dr. Hatfield was the pastor.

We next moved to Second Place, Brooklyn. Henry and I used to enjoy going to Holland Patent every summer to visit Grandmother Hamlin. While living in Brooklyn I attended Packer Institute but on account of nervous attacks every spring was unable to graduate."

Aunt Cornelia was married in 1873 and went into Uncle Alanson's home at Painted Post, N.Y. We all remember Painted Post days and how she made the place a perfect paradise for us children - Foxes, MacArthurs and Stebbins. Who can forget the playhouse in the backyard or the tree with steps and platform, the woodshed and high swings, Stuart's donkey "Jeddie" and Alan's pony "Tiny", the three seated Democrat wagon into which we were all piled and driven to church and sunday school no matter what the weather was, the hot Circus days in Corning when everyone was cross except Julia, the lumber piles in the Lumber Yard made for hide and seek and frequent picnics and even the Railroad Crossing where we used to stand and watch for trains to pass after supper on summer evenings? We remember the morning prayers with which each day began, the games to tag at bedtime peremptorily stopped by Aunt Cornelia and the Sunday morning breakfasts when those who had learned and recited their Sunday school lesson the night before were allowed to indulge in "Cambric" coffee.

The joy and atmosphere of those Painted Post days may be taken as typical of Aunt Cornelia's later homes in Detroit and New York, for in them one always had the same sense of leisure - time for everything and for everyone - so rare when most of the world is in a hurry. Everyone felt happy in her presence.

Equally rare was her understanding of children. She never forgot what they like to do, to have, to see and to play. The last two presents she gave, three days before her death, were a beautiful dressed doll to Joan Freeman and some music to Joe Fox. She had the heart of a child - the simplicity, spontaneity, fairness, enthusiasm and faith of a child. At the same time she kept fully abreast of the times as shown by the fact that she never failed to register and to cast her vote. She loved a joke, was always willing to give the benefit of a doubt to others and unwilling to let up on herself and showed great loyalty and devotion to her family and to her church.

Should I venture to suggest the secret of what she was to us all, it would be that in her daily life she "practiced the presence of God." This became so natural that it colored everything and every relationship in her life. Aunt Cornelia stood the supreme test. She loved God with all her heart and her neighbor as herself.

A Tribute to Uncle Norman By Dr. George T. Stevens
(Reprinted from the Fox Family News of Sept. 1, 1912)

"The subject of this communication is a sad one and yet, since the necessity of a proper recognition of the fact is upon us, it is an agreeable one.

I write of our late and greatly beloved comrade, Chaplain Norman Fox. Since your last reunion our dear friend has finished his term of service here and has received an honorable discharge from the ranks of our Association of Survivors. I need not recall his personality to you. Every member of the old regiment remembers it well. Did we ever see the chaplain without that familiar smile? It had grown upon him. It was a part of him. It was not put on for the parade, he could not help wearing it and best of all he did not want to help wearing it. Then we all remember his kindly sympathy for each of us when trouble or perplexity came upon us. He did not preach to us then, but he sat down by our side and said some cheering hopeful thing that made us feel stronger and better able to march against our difficulties. Do we not recall how when one of our member was sick he threw himself down beside the sick one and asked about the loved ones at home and how, from the mouth of the sufferer, words were written and sent to the anxious friends in the north and how, in his own words, he spoke hopeful and comforting things to those who read them with tears? You could not have seen him as I did at the hospitals in time of battle. It was he who reclined by the side of the stretcher or by the bed improvised of boughs on the ground and spoke softly in words of courage and hope to the badly wounded man. And when, as it too often happened, the wounded man gave up the fight there in the field hospital, it was his pen that told the stricken mother or wife or friends the terrible news in terms so gentle and so considerate, so just to the memory of the dead soldier and so comforting to the hearts of his family that the blow was softened and the bowed hearts lifted up.

All these things you remember even if you did not see them as I saw them and no soldier of the Seventy-Seventh will ever forget the kind offices which sprung from this kind, cheerful and hopeful heart.

Now let me speak briefly of his history and of his "muster out."

Chaplain Fox was born in the village of Glens Falls, N.Y., February 13th, 1836. His father, the Rev. Norman Fox, was, at that time, pastor of the Baptist Church in that village.

The boy Norman was sent to the public and private schools and at length he entered the University of Rochester from which he graduated in 1855. Wishing to follow the lead of his honored father he took up the study of divinity and, entering the Rochester Theological Seminary, he graduated from this in 1857. In later years he was honored by his Alma Mater with the degree of Doctor of Divinity.

His first ministry was at a church in Whitehall, N.Y. How much he was beloved by his congregation I learned after the War, when, with him and in company of our dear Colonel French, I visited at the charming home of one of his old parishioners where we heard from the lips of those who knew, how greatly our friend had been esteemed in his parish.

But the war came and the young clergyman felt, as we all felt, the call to go into the larger service of our country. He wisely felt that he could do better service as the friend, comforter and counselor of soldiers than by carrying arms. So he surrendered the pastoral charge of the church where he had won his first success and came to us as our Chaplain in the autumn of 1862. From that time forward to the day of mustering out of the Regiment he was with us in camp and on the march, through the campaigns of the Grand Army of the Potomac from Fredericksburg to Petersburg and in all of our wonderful marches and battles in the Shenandoah Valley, where, under the leadership of Wright and Sheridan, our old Sixth Corps took so conspicuous and so noble a part. When these campaigns were over, after we had forced our opponents back at Cedar Creek, beaten and disorganized, the Reg'ment was ordered to Saratoga, where you meet today, to be mustered out. To the honor and credit of a large number of our old Regiment a battalion remained, reenlisted and marched in the grand demonstration of final victory in Washington. But the authorities did not allow a chaplain to such a battalion and Chaplain Fox was one of us who were mustered out of the service of the United States December 12th, 1864.

The Chaplain returned to civil life but not to a life of repose. He devoted himself to literature and took up the work of a professor. To his work he brought enthusiasm and earnest study.

Making his home at length in the beautiful city of Morristown he was elected to offices of trust and was finally chosen Mayor, an office which he filled with honor to himself and advantage to his city.

I need not tell his old comrades that Dr. Fox was an ideal chaplain nor that he was greatly beloved by us all but since you did not all know him in private life I may add that he was a man of fine culture and of extensive reading. During many years of his life he was free from the cares and responsibilities of business life and he traveled extensively, his fund of general information and his habits of observation enabling him to enjoy to the uttermost and to communicate to this friends the varied subjects of interest which were presented to his notice.

The Chaplain was a most genial companion, a loyal friend, and an agreeable writer, a useful citizen and a faithful member of our Association. His qualities of mind and heart combined to endear him to a large circle of friends who now deplore his loss. His death occured June 23rd, 1907.

He served his time, he is mustered out from our ranks with honor. I am sure, comrades, that I have uttered the sentiments of your own hearts in this, perhaps too long and yet too brief a sketch of our departed friend."

Colonel William Freeman Fox By Dr. Wallace Buttrick
(Reprinted from the Fox Family News of Nov. 1, 1912)

Gentle, modest, learned, true, unaffected, unconsciously great, - words like these crowd upon my mind as I think of my dear friend, William Freeman Fox. I had been at the Emmanuel Church in Albany some three years before I came to know him, save in the most casual way. He attended Church morning and evening; he was always friendly when we met; I did not appreciate that his reserve was born of his refined modesty.

A great sorrow in his home brought us together in a sympathy and affection that grew in strength until he went on before. His companionship I regard as one of the greatest blessings of my life; I sat at his feet as a learner; he did not know it but he became one of my three or four real teachers. He was a fountain of information and of sound philosophy within the range, by no means narrow, of his interest and knowledge.

He was a student of American History; the facts of American History he recalled with accuracy; the genius and significance of American institutions he appreciated; he was, therefore, able to interpret and show the significance of historic facts and current events. He had the sound judgment of a statesman.

He was widely read in English and American literature. It was not easy to mention a good book that he had not read. His appreciative comments on good books created in one a desire to read them.

He preeminently excelled in two particulars: his knowledge of nature, - plants, forests, animals, birds, etc., and in his intimate acquaintance with the campaigns of the Civil War. One October I had the pleasure of riding with him for hundreds of miles in the Adirondack Forest Reservation. His conversation revealed his appreciation of the glories of the autumnal forests. He seemed personally acquainted with every tree and shrub. He did not realize how eloquent he was, how entrancing, as he made us acquainted with these life long friends of his. I can never forget an evening before the great fireplace in the hotel at Meacham Lake after our long ride through the forests. He never knew how richly he entertained us as he recalled and interpreted the events of the day.

One summer day, a few years ago, I went on board an Old Dominion steamer with my wife. We were overjoyed to meet Colonel and Mrs. Fox, who were already on board. A day or two after we went up the James River, on the old steamer Pocahontas. There, again, the Colonel was at his best. He recalled every battle and skirmish of that region. As he was talking to us a Lieutenant Colonel of the Confederate Army introduced himself. It turned out that they were on opposite sides in many of the military events of that region. We often speak with delight of the conversation between those two men, they were so enthusiastic, as sitting by the boat's rail, they pointed out the interesting places of that historic region.

I could say much more of my dear friend if space in the "Fox Family News" permitted. It seems to me that as husband, father and friend, Colonel Fox approached the ideal. At the risk of seeming extravagance I will say that he was as good a man as I ever knew. The spirit of our Master seemed to fill his very being. Probabl he lacked in self-assertion, for if he had had a little more of it the lateral influence of his splended life would have been greater; possibly, however, its depth and richness would have been less.

My Brother Charles By Norman Fox (1836-1907)

(Reprinted from the Fox Family News of January 1, 1913)

"CHARLES JAMES FOX, fourth son of Norman and Jane Freeman Fox, was born at Ballston Spa, N.Y., April 9, 1842. When he was nine years of age the family removed to Schenectady where he studied in that quaint old building the Schenectady Lyceum and afterwards in the City High School, in the old "West College" edifice. He graduated from Union College in 1861.

His father and grandfather before him had been engaged in the lumber business and on his graduation he took a position in the lumber yard of Mead, Dunham & Co. in Albany. But business more stirring than commercial transactions was in those times engrossing the thoughts of the people, namely, the war for the preservation of the Union. He was not an excitable person eager for adventure but his father had taken part in the war of 1812, his grandfather in the War of the Revolution, and his great-grandfather in the Old French War, so that it was easy to believe that when duty became clear he would not be backward in taking part in the effort for the salvation of the nation's life.

In the summer of 1862 he received a letter from his brother William at the lumber mills of Fox, Weston and Bronson at Painted Post, Steuben Co. N.Y. asking him to become First Lieutenant of a company then forming and immediately he complied with the call. The company was organized for the greater part, from the workmen in the mills; William F. Fox, Charles J. Fox and Irving Bronson being its Captain and Lieutenants. It was made C. G. of the 107th, New York, enlisted in Steuben, Chemung and Schuyler counties, the first regiment from the State to respond to the call of President Lincoln for "three hundred thousand more".

It was a sober day in the family home, now at Painted Post, when the two boys with their regiment were to leave the rendezvous at Elmira and go to the front. The Lieutenant left in the early morning to take charge of the company to allow the Captain to come and give his farewells. The family was sitting at the table at noon when it came time for him to depart. Opening the dining room door the width of his face he looked in and said good-bye. That was all. No one arose from the table for no one felt able to take the risk of a formal leave taking. In the supreme moments of life there is little inclination for words and ceremony. He went to the room where his father was lying dangerously sick, no one knew but near his end. Feebly he took the Captain's hand but with firm voice said, "Good-bye, my son, the Lord cover your head in the day of battle," and with but a word or two more the short farewell was ended. That evening the regiment marched out and was put on cars for Washington.

And it was another sober time in the family circle when in a few days came the battle of Antietam, the bloodiest one day's conflict ever taking place on this continent, and it was known that the boys were engaged in it. It happened to be their father's birthday, the completion of his three score and ten years. This was naturally alluded to in the family circle that evening and he spoke of God's goodness in watching over him and in giving him a daughter and five sons to love, but interrupting himself he said, "I don't know how many boys I have tonight." Two of the number had that morning entered the thick cloud of battle and though the telegraph wires were hot that evening with accounts of the titanic conflict, no one knew as yet what ones were lying amid the slain.

The regiment was made a part of the First (William's) Division of the Twelfth (Slocum's) Army Corps serving with the Army of the Potomac till the autumn after the battle of Gerrysburg when it was sent to the West, taking part in the Atlanta campaign. The Captain, made Major and Lieutenant Colonel, was wounded at Chancellorsville and afterwards at Resaca and was mustered out. The younger brother becoming Captain and Major, went with Sherman to Atlanta and on the famous march to the Sea at Savannah, on the islands near which he was detailed to difficult and dangerous service; then on through the Carolinas, taking part in the battles of Averysboro and Bentonville, and marching in the great Review in Washington at the close of the war.

Major Fox, though quiet and undemonstrative, was one of the bravest of the brave. Few officers were so often under fire as he. While one who is disabled and lying in the hospital will escape several fights, he who seemed to bear a charmed life and was never seriously wounded, was on hand to take part in every engagement and he never shrank from duty. He was moreover an able disciplinarian. When he first took rank he had to assert his authority to keep the men who had known him as a boy from addressing him as "Charley," but though strict he was beloved. Among his brother officers he was ever one of the most popular. And it was a glad evening in the spring of 1865 when, the band sounded the cheering strains, "When Johnny comes marching home," the family circle received him back to their number. Of the five brothers four had been enrolled in the army.

While still in the army he had formed a marriage engagement through the mail. The two had known each other as a boy and girl. To a prudent friend who asked what if he come home lacking an arm or a leg? she answered, "Then I will marry what is left of him." The wedding took place the autumn after his return.

Immediately on his discharge from the army he entered the office of Fox, Weston and Bronson and in time became a member of the firm. He gave himself to the duties of civil life with the same faithfulness which had characterized his military career. He was for several years a member of the Board of Supervisors of Steuben County and a working member of the body. He stood high in the respect and confidence of all, being everywhere popular and beloved. In 1888 he removed to Detroit, Mich. He served as Secretary of the Chicago Lumbering Co. doing business at Manistique, Mich.

After the funeral of his brother Alanson who died October 29, 1903, he went to a health resort at Battle Creek, Mich., where he had before spent some time. His wife was to join him in a few days. On November 29th, he took a walk with a friend in the afternoon and chatted for a while in the evening. The next morning as he did not come down to breakfast one went to his room and entering unlocked the door found him sitting in a small rocking chair, with one leg thrown easily over the other and his watch in his hand as if winding it. No answer came as he was spoken to and a nearer approach revealed the fact that he was dead. It would appear that in preparing to retire for the night he had sat down to wind his watch and had passed away without a pang, so quietly as not to fall from the chair nor to let the watch slip from his hand. It was an ideal departure. He died just a month after his brother.

At the funeral in Detroit the bearers were members of the Michigan Commandery of the Loyal Legion, the society of the officers of the Union Army, and over his coffin was draped the flag in defence of which he had marched and fought. The services at the house were conducted by the Rev. Dr. Meeser and at the cemetery by Chaplain Norman Fox of the 77th. New York Vols. and Chaplain Robinson of the First Infantry, U.S.A. then stationed at Fort Wayne in the suburbs of Detroit. The latter was a classmate of Maj. Fox in Union College and afterwards an officer on the staff of Gen. Williams to whose Division Maj. Fox's regiment belonged and now after return from service in the Phillipines he was stationed where he could join in the last honors to his former college classmate and army comrade.

The burial was at Woodmere. The loved brother, the tender husband and father, the honored companion, the knightly soldier, there rests in the bivouac of the dead.

MEMORIAL SKETCH OF CAPTAIN CHARLES J. FOX, Issued by Military Order of Loyal Legion of the United States. Commandery of the State of Michigan
(Reprinted from the Fox Family News of January 1917)

Detroit, Mich. Jan. 20, 1904.

Companions:

On the 29th day of November last Companion Charles J. Fox, of this Commandery, was suddenly called from his earthly labors to a far better inheritance in the world to come. He entered the service of his country July 29th, 1862 as First Lieutenant in the 107th N. Y. Infty, was made Captain May 10th, 1863, and commissioned as Major of the same regiment Sept. 27th, 1864, but could not muster as Major on account of the depletion of the regiment. Was honorably discharged with his regiment at the close of the war, June 5th 1865.

His regiment served in the famous "Red Star Division" of the 12th and 20th corps and fought in every engagement in which that peerless division flashed its red star, and it is glory enough to say that Companion Fox was with and fought with his command in every one of those engagements. He was elected into the Order through the Commandery of the State of Michigan, April 2nd, 1891.

His insignia was No. 8712.

Major Charles James Fox died November 29th, 1903, at the Phelps Sanitorium, Battle Creek, Mich. His death was sudden, but quiet and peaceful. He was found dead on Monday morning by a friend who had spent the previous evening with him and had left him in excellent spirits and apparently good health. He found him just as he had left him - sitting in a rocking chair, his legs crossed and his head lying back over the chair as if asleep, and with his open watch in his hand. Death was evidently the result of heart failure. He had been spending much of his time at the Sanitorium during the past year, not as a patient but as a guest of the hotel.

He was born April 9, 1842, in Ballston Spa, the fifth child of Rev. Norman and Jane Freeman Fox. He was graduated at Union College in the class of 1861, and in the following year entered the army, having received a commission as first lieutenant in the 107th Regiment New York Volunteers. The young lieutenant, then twenty years old, was assigned to Company C. of which his brother William was captain, and in the course of his service was promoted successively to captain and major in the same regiment. He was present with his command in every battle and skirmish of the Red Star Division of the corps known as the 12th corps in the Army of the Potomac and subsequently as the 20th in Sherman's Army, at Antietam, Chancellorsville, Gettysburg, Resaca, New Hope Church, Peach Tree Creek, Siege of Atlanta, the March to the Sea, Siege of Savannah, the Carolinas, Averysboro and Bentonville, and he rode in the Grand Review at Washington at the close of the war.

Having been mustered out of service in June, 1865, he engaged in the lumber business at Painted Post, N.Y., becoming a partner in the old established firm of Fox, Weston & Co. He was married in 1865 to Miss Louise O. Wright, of Schenectady, N.Y. a daughter of Hon. John C. Wright, Judge of the Supreme Court, and formerly Comptroller of the State.

In 1886 Major Fox was appointed by Governor Hill a trustee of the State Soldier's Home at Bath, N.Y. an honorary but responsible position.

He resided at Painted Post until the firm of Fox, Weston & Co. closed out its interests there, and transferred its business to the Northern Peninsula of Michigan, whereupon he moved his residence, in 1891, to Detroit. In 1898 he was elected Secretary of the Chicago Lumbering Company, whose mills, offices, stores and other properties are located at Manistique. His oldest brother, Mr. Alanson J. Fox, who died recently in Detroit, was president of the company.

Major Fox was one of five brothers, four of whom served in the civil war, - Rev. Norman Fox, D. D. Chaplain 77th N.Y.; Colonel William F. Fox, 107th N.Y. author of "Regimental Losses in the Civil War," and "New York at Gettysburg"; Major Charles J. Fox, 107th N.Y. and Dr. George H. Fox, 77th N.Y. He is survived by these three brothers, and a sister, Mrs. R. S. MacArthur, of New York City. In his immediate family he leaves a wife, four sons and one daughter.

The Corning Democrat, a newspaper published in the country where his regiment was raised, in speaking of Major Fox's brilliant record in the war, says:

> "During the three years of that regiment's arduous service he was always with them, never missing a battle or skirmish in which they were engaged. Their heavy losses made promotion rapid, and before he was twenty two years old the young lieutenant became major of the regiment."

During Sherman's march from Atlanta to the Sea, the illness of his superior officers placed the command of the regiment in his hands, and when, by order of General Slocum the 107th took possession of Milledgeville, the capitol of Georgia, Major Fox was in command with headquarters in the State House. For the skillful manner in which the regiment was handled during the brilliant campaign he received high commendation from his brigade and division commanders. There were few men of his age in the volunteer service who made such a record for coolness and steadiness in the time of action, or for constant unremitting care of the interests and comforts of those who served under him. A classmate of his at Union and again his comrade in William's "Red Star Division" pays high tribute to his career as student, soldier and citizen. He was an ideal soldier and officer, combining with manly courage all the kindly traits of a gentleman.

A GOLDEN WEDDING ANNIVERSARY By Howard Fox (1873-1954)
(Reprinted from the Fox Family News of Sept. 1, 1920)

The Golden Wedding Anniversary of Aunt Elizabeth and Uncle Robert was celebrated on August 4th, at Suffield, Ct., and was an occasion that will never be forgotten by those who were fortunate enough to be present. The festivities were opened with a luncheon attended by thirty relatives and friends. This was followed by outdoor exercises in which heartfelt tributes and good natured raillery were intermingled. Uncle George, acting as master of ceremonies, called on Kenneth to offer a prayer. He was followed by Gertrude who read letters and telegrams of congratulations from a host of friends and relatives. She also read an original poem but through excessive modesty has not allowed it to be printed. Rob and Edith then told the assembled guests what wonderful parents they were fortunate enough to have and were followed by Montague who spoke in behalf of the much abused son-in-law. He said:- "Search through the world's best literature from the era of the Medes and Persians to the modern classic "That's me all over Mabel," and no article will be found bearing on the subject of the son-in-law. What a fine theme for a literary sensation! If a lamb could write about a pig and thereby add to his fame, surely some of you has an opportunity to obtain renown by composing an essay entitled "The Son-in-Law." There's a suggestion for the editor of the Fox Family News.

To be a son-in-law has its advantages and disadvantages. My troubles commenced when I was courting Edith, then living on 57th street. It was remarked by one of the MacArthur's that it took Montague as long to say good night as it did Edith to get ready to come down and say good evening. I have explained to you, Laddie, how on board a ship, the time is indicated by means of the ringing of a bell. In the MacArthur household I always knew the evening hour by means of a certain noise. As Edith and I sat in the parlor, she reading the "Watchman-Examiner," I asleep in an arm chair, all would be quiet on the parlor floor, all peaceful above. On the minute of 10:30 a door would be slammed, at 11 another bang, on the stroke of 11:30 a terrible slam. I never waited for another but always managed to leave before midnight and thus prevented my sainted father-in-law from uttering the word that rhymes with slam.

The year 1870 was a memorable one in the world's history. Important events were occuring in many countries. Eugenie and the Emperor had lost their positions though her beauty and charm remained. But she was no more beautiful or charming than Queen Elizabeth who was then being joined in holy wedlock to King Robert.

Some years ago, a friend of my father, whom we shall call Fielding asked him for a suggestion as to an appropriate gift for his wife, on the thirtieth anniversary of their marriage. Fielding and his wife were continually quarrelling so father advised giving a copy of the "The Thirty Years War." Fielding thought that a wonderful idea and presented his wife with the book. What a contrast their married life makes with the one we are now celebrating. Fifty years of war? No fifty years of peace! Fifty years of contention? You mean fifty years of contentment! Fifty years of strife? Nay fifty years of glorious life!

The funny papers joke about the mother-in-law but I never could see any humor in such lies. As far as I am concerned, there never was a more fortunate son-in-law. For over twenty years I have not heard one unkind word or the slightest criticism, although it must have required much strength of character to keep quiet. I heartily appreciate your silence.

In Drinkwater's play, at one of the cabinet meetings, Lincoln says to his Secretary of State, "Seward I know my faults and weaknesses, but one tremendous asset is mine, the people believe in me." When the world was not going very well with me, my father over there and my mother, here, believed in me, trusted me, had faith in me. My chief asset was their faith which encouraged, inspired and uplifted me.

One of the many reasons I had for wanting to marry Edith was that I might become the son-in-law of her father and mother. One cannot select father or mother, but you may choose your father and mother-in-law. My choice was made with rare discrimination and keen judgment. When I plucked Edith, that "queen rose of the rose bud garden of girls" from off the Fox-MacArthur rose bush, I was conscious not only of her beauty and sweetness, but carefully examined the bush from which she came. The family into which one marries, to a certain extent, can make for happiness or the opposite. My married life has been more than happy.

While sitting here I have been looking at my mother and wondering who could compare with her, and I decided only one, my father! Then I looked at father. Who is comparable to him? Only one, my mother!"

Nellie then spoke for the daughter-in-law, Rev. Charles MacGregor spoke for the nephews and Ada for the nieces. Ada said she had been chosen to speak, not on account of oratorical ability but because of all the nieces and nephews she had the greatest affection for her aunt and uncle. (We feel compelled to challenge this statement-Ed.) She bemoaned her misfortune in not having a descendant who could have been named Elizabeth. Even her first grandchild was a boy. At the close of her remarks Ada presented our aunt and uncle with a purse of gold, the gift of the nephews and nieces. The following poem by Miss Edith Bell was recited by little Montague:-

Grandparents dear, a verse for you,
  Is all that I can say.
It is such fun to all be here,
  Together on this day.

Grandparents dear, your lives have been
  Examples good and true.
I hope that I can always look
  On golden years like you.

Aunt Elizabeth, when called upon to speak told a few incidents of her engagement. Her brother William, she said, appeared solicitous to know whether her intended, who was Scotch, could speak English. "What, Libby Fox marry a minister?" he was heard to say when told the prospective bridegroom was a reverend gentleman, and proceeded to paint a dismal picture of her future life as the wife of a country minister. In the course of her remarks, Aunt Elizabeth gave some good advice to the unmarried members of the family. "First," she said, "you must have discipline" and added by pointing to her spouse, "here you see the finished product." There were several characteristics she continued that were essential to marital happiness. They included deep affection and mutual respect, gallantry, optimism and moral purpose. Our Uncle's optimism we all recognized by her reference to his being able to eat scorched oatmeal and give the impression that the flavor was thereby enhanced. Aunt Elizabeth's final word of advice was "Not to let him know you were proud of him."

Owing to the lateness of the hour and perhaps to some side remarks by his devoted wife which sounded like "Sit down Robert, the photographers are waiting," Uncle Robert's remarks were somewhat brief. He said that if his bride "should live another fifty years she would approach an angel in intellectual development and character" (loud applause). He also paid a fine tribute to his nephews the MacGregors and to Aunt Harriet and referred to having married her to Uncle George at Titusville.

At the conclusion of the speeches the party adjourned to the lawn where numerous pictures were taken by a professional photographer. This was followed by a general reception for the friends in Suffield and vicinity. The following were present at the luncheon and speechmaking: - In addition to the bride and groom, Aunt Cornelia, Aunt Annie, Uncle George, Ada, Walter, Rob, Nellie, Gertrude, Edith, Montague, Adaline, Harry, Kenneth, Rachel, Alice, Noel, Alanson, Howard, and four of the children including Montague, Jr., Marian, Harvey and Robert, and Mr. and Mrs. Herbert MacGregor, Rev. Charles P. MacGregor, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur MacGregor and daughter, Miss Mary Rogers, Miss Martha Strube and the Rev. John Love.

HARRIET GIBBS FOX. 1848-1915

(Reprinted from the Fox Family News - Supplement of May 1, 1915)

"Aunt Hattie" as she was familiarly and affectionately known in our family circle, after an illness of two and a half years, is gone.

She was born and spent her childhood days in Nunda, N.Y. and was educated at the Collegiate Institute in Rochester, N.Y. She was married at Titusville, Pa. Aug. 29th 1872, her father having moved there from Nunda. During her first year of married life she lived in Paris and London and then made New York her home, spending her summers in recent years at her country residence at Glen Cove, L.I.

She was active in church and philanthropic work, serving as Chairman of the House Committee of the Students Club and on the Board of Managers of the Baptist Home for the Aged. She was one of the founders of the Meridian Club and a member of the Barnard Club. In music, to which she was devoted, her taste and skill afforded great pleasure both to herself and to many others.

At her funeral service at the Calvary Baptist Church, of which she had been a member for forty-two years, the organ was played by Miss Chittenden and two favorite hymns were sung by Mr. Bushnell. Dr. MacArthur said:

"No word can be more appropriate for this friend and sister than that she be called God's beloved. She was our beloved. I have never had a thought of her, not even for a moment, but love. I knew her as a girl in her father's and mother's home, and as a daughter and sister she was beloved. I knew her in the circle of her school life and as a pupil in her school she was beloved by every other pupil and every teacher in that school. I knew her in her married life, as wife and mother, and in every circle she was beloved as few people have ever been. I knew her in this church as a most devoted and consecrated member, and in our Sunday School where she instructed the large primary class for many years. I knew her in the circle of student life, and she was beloved by all, as a skillful musician, as a charming hostess and as a friend to all especially to the aged and the needy, she filled a large and loving place in all our hearts."

Obituary notices appeared in several of the New York daily papers, in the Glen Cove Echo and in the Nunda News. The latter contained letters written by friends who had known her since childhood and from which the following extracts are taken.

"Her presence had a personal atmosphere which made others happier for her presence. It is seldom one can write words like these of anyone. Two years and a half of suffering borne so patiently and then she passed on to the beyond, making this world less bright, because she must go. Memories will remain and her good works, her loving ways her constant deeds of kindness will live on because such perfect characters make a lasting impression." Katherine Bell Lewis.

"Many of the readers of your papers will recall with pleasure her visit to Nunda during "Home Week" some years since, where she was a prominent, if not the central figure in the exercises and festivities of that event, and where with genuine grace and warm affection, she greeted and entertained everyone she knew or their posterity. She never lost her royal affection for the village of her birth, and her interest in its prosperity or its people never weakened." Mary Metcalf Peck.

A MEMORABLE BIRTHDAY PARTY: Words from Dr. Fox on his 75th birthday, 8 October 1921
(Reprinted from the Fox Family News of November 1, 1921)

...The toastmaster then decided to let "George do it" and called upon the comparatively youthful looking gentleman of 75 for a response to the greetings of his friends. Uncle George, standing as straight as when he was a soldier in the Civil War, spoke as follows:

"My dear friends (whether kindred by blood, kindred by marriage or kindred in spirit): I have no speech to make befitting this occasion. At my age and with the varied experiences of seventy-five years of active life, I might perhaps have tried to rival Cicero by giving you a dissertation on old age. Cicero, however, wasn't really in my class, for he died when twelve years younger than I am.

I am ready to plead guilty to the charge of being an old man. My only defense is that I still feel young and frisky. We often hear of the infirmities of age. I rejoice to say that I am now more free from aches and pains than perhaps at any period of my life and am inclined to regard such as the infirmities of infancy and youth. I must admit that I cannot run as fast, jump as high or walk as far as I could a few years ago, but I hope that all of you will feel as young and as well as I do when you come to celebrate your seventy-fifth birthday.

And now let me thank you most heartily and most sincerely for the kind interest you have shown in coming here today. Would that I could find words to express my full appreciation of this and the feelings of affection and friendship that lie deep in my heart. I can only say, using the delightful Friendly language, 'I thank thee,' and add like Rip Van Winkle 'Here's to you and your families and may they all live long and prosper." God bless you!" ...

NOEL BLEECKER FOX by Clinton F. Ivins (1887-1975)
A Citation and an Appreciation

Scion of ancient English and Dutch ancestors, proud of his heritage and their service to this nation, Noel Bleecker Fox has set an example of devotion to the public interest, his State, its armed forces, his family, and his university.

Born in New York City in 1878, son of Norman Fox II, a Civil War veteran and of Jane Byvanck Bleecker, a descendant of early Dutch settlers, Noel was educated at Lawrenceville School, Princeton University Class of 1899, and Columbia Law School.

After graduation, he practiced law in New York, engaged in local politics, and was elected to the New York State Legislature, and served two terms at Albany, 1921-1923.

Noel has always been interested in family history, particularly that of Norman Fox I and his five sons, one his father, all of whom had distinguished Civil War records. He, in association with other relatives, helped organize the Society of the Descendants of Norman Fox and obtained a charter for the same with the Secretary of State in Albany in 1904. He has done much to maintain interest and support for the Society over the years. Since the deaths of Dr. George Henry Fox, M.D., our genealogist in 1937, and of his son, Dr. Howard Fox, M.D., our benefactor, in 1954, Noel has been the undisputed leader of our Fox clan and a stimulus for family pride and solidarity among the far-flung members of the family.

Noel achieved fame at an early age when as "poler Fox", he was featured as the studious schoolboy in the famous series of boys' books by Owen Johnson, which were later filmed and distributed nationally.

"Bleecker" as his classmates knew him, is a member of the Class of 1899 at Princeton and a loyal supporter of college activities and traditions. He has a record of never having missed a Yale-Princeton football game from freshman up to his ninetieth year. At the Princeton reunion of 1969, he led the alumni parade and received the gold-headed cane as the oldest alumnus present.

Noel inherited an interest in the military and at an early age joined the crack cavalry "Squadron A" of the New York National Guard with whom he served ten years, seeing active service on the Mexican border in 1916. As World War I approached, he attended the 1st and 2nd Plattsburg Training Camps and shortly thereafter joined the 305th Field Artillery and served with that outfit in France in 1917-1918. Returning to the United States, he became Major in Command of Fort Sill, Oklahoma, then entered the reserves, and ended his active military career as Colonel.

His interests in the national patriotic societies and military orders has always been strong, and he became life members and officers of the following:

Loyal Legion Society	Sons of American Revolution
Society of Colonial Wars	Military Order of Foreign Wars
Society of the Cincinnati	The Navy League
Society of the War of 1812	Colonial Order of the Acorn
St. Nicholas Society	Veteran Corps of the Artillery
American Legion	Westchester County Historical Society

Noel has been a regular attendant at the meetings of these organizations and has striven to help maintain and perpetuate interest and pride in the nation's history and accomplishments.

He is a life member of the New York State Bar Association and the Bar Association of the City of New York.

He is now retired to his home in Bronxville at age 93, where with his devoted wife, Kathryn, he takes his daily walks and reflects on an active and constructive life spent as historian, genealogist, patriot, and patriarch of his Fox family line.

The following is from Cecil Derry's "A Brief History of the Old Cambridge Baptist Church" relating to the pastorate of Rev. MacArthur, which was from September 1919, until May 1, 1925.

"Mr. MacArthur seems to have been the only minister of this church who graduated from our neighboring university. He graduated from Harvard in 1904. In 1908 he graduated from Union Theological Seminary in New York, magna cum laude. He served in the Bronx (Tremont Baptist Church), then at Worcester Academy, then at Suffield, Connecticut. In 1918 he went to France as chaplain in the American Expeditionary Force and immediately upon his return to the United States came here.

Mr. MacArthur was always a prodigious worker, gifted with tireless physical and mental energy. He was a faithful pastor, a brother beloved by men of many denominations."

This, from The First Church, Sterling, Massachusetts dated September 1959.

In Memorium
Reverend Kenneth C. MacArthur
Pastor Emeritus of the First Church in Sterling
Pastor of the Federated Church in Sterling, 1925-1947

Memories of Rev. Kenneth C. MacArthur will long remain with the people of Sterling, a man who loved his family, his church, his country, his community and all of God's creatures.

Rev. MacArthur was a scholar, teacher and preacher. He was one who believed in the advancement of education. He was graduated from Worcester Academy and received his bachelor's and master's degrees from Harvard University and his theological degree from Union Theological Seminary of New York. In his late years he studied for his PhD, and while doing so had the distinction of being the oldest G.I. student in the United States.

He was an ordained Baptist minister for fifty years, and a Deacon of the First Church until his death. He also was a teacher of Rural Church and related subjects at several schools and seminaries (University of Conn. at Storrs; Andover-Newton Sem., Newton, Mass.; Univ. of Mass., Amherst - Ed.), and was elected a delegate to the World Conference on Faith and Order at Switzerland in 1927.

Continually from 1905, he had some connection with the Armed Forces. He served as Chaplain with the rank of Captain in World War I and in World War II with a commission of Lt. Colonel and retired in 1946, a Colonel and at that time was the recipient of a special Army Commendation ribbon.

His work in the community will long be remembered. Rev. MacArthur was the founder and organizer of the Sterling 4H Animal Husbandry Club composed of boys and girls, some of whom are leading farmers in Sterling. He was President of the Sterling Farmer's Club for seven consecutive terms, and was presented a citation for outstanding community service on the 100th anniversary of the Sterling Fair and Old Home Day. After serving as Chaplain of the Hiram O. Taylor Post American Legion for 33 years, he was presented a gold life membership card. He also was a member and officer of Sterling Grange for a number of years.

Rev. MacArthur's love of nature and living things is one that all can admire. Until recent years, he always kept several cows, chickens and other farm animals, and at one time had a small farm out of the center on Rt. 140. His love of the Lord and all His beings has been and will be an inspiration not only for the family, but for all who knew him."

K.C.M. and Noel Fox enjoyed hiking in the mountains. Among them they covered Vosges Moutains and the Green Mountain Trail.

IN MEMORIAM - HELEN FOX TROWBRIDGE

One of the oldest and most beloved members of SDNF, Helen Fox (Mrs. Mason) Trowbridge, died at the Charlotte Hungerford Hospital in West Cornwall, Connecticut on July 27, 1970 following a brief illness. She was eighty-seven years old.

Those of us who attended the 1965 Fox family party in her honor at Yelping Hill (the Trowbridge summer home in West Cornwall since 1922) will remember Cousin Helen as a gracious hostess and proud matriarch of her large family of children, grandchildren, and cousins.

Born Helen Fox in 1882, she was the daughter of Dr. George Henry Fox. At the time when young New York ladies were discouraged from attending college, Helen Fox managed to study chemistry at Cooper Union and sculpture at the New York School of Design. As a young woman, she and her portable studio were a familiar sight from Harlem to Chinatown as she sculpted a series of babies of many races and nationalities. She was the first designer of dolls with composition heads, most dolls having been made of fragile china. Jackie Coogan was the model for the first of this popular series, which was nationally distributed by Horsman Dolls, Inc.

In recent years, many residents of northwestern Connecticut, where the family began spending their winters in 1954, were delighted at Christmas to receive from their neighbor, plates laden with sculpted foodstuffs, tiny vases filled with miniature flowers and other miniature craft objects which she continued to design and make until about a year ago. What few of the recipients knew was that she had begun to work with miniatures decades earlier when a friend who had had a nervous breakdown needed something to do and was enabled to support himself producing Trowbridge-designed miniatures.

Helen met her husband-to-be when he was a student at Yale Law School, and they were married in 1909. Mason was general counsel of Colgate-Palmolive Company and died in 1962. While her six children were growing up, Helen's literary interests expanded; she specialized in biographies of British and American women and read many hundreds of these. Her Yelping Hill Library was also stocked to overflowing with early children's books and 19th-century books on etiquette. Her books as well as her miniatures, were often displayed at local libraries, Grange meetings, etc. As familiar as the Trowbridges themselves was their Irish setter, Jock, locally famous because he had charge accounts at both West Cornwall grocery stores.

All of her far flung family and friends will mourn the passing of Cousin Helen, a gifted artist, loving mother, and a warm humanitarian.

MASON TROWBRIDGE

From the Lakeville Courier Journal, March 15, 1962

"Mason Trowbridge, a summer resident of Cornwall for more than forty years and one of its best beloved year-long residents for a decade, died Sunday at the Charlotte Hungerford Hospital in Torrington, in his eighty-fifth year.

Mason Trowbridge was educated in the public schools of Chicago, leaving high school after Christmas of his senior year to earn a living. After three years selling law books, paging in the Public Library and clerking in a machine shop, he received a telegram from an uncle who had struck it rich in Mexico, offering to send him to Yale. Young Trowbridge quit his job, spent an evening reading one page from the Iliad with his sister and departed for New Haven, arriving four days after college had opened.

During his undergraduate years, Mason Trowbridge distinguished himself particularly as a debater, being on the varsity team for three years and later coaching it. In one debate, in which he led his team to victory, the Princeton coach was a Professor Woodrow Wilson, and one of the judges was a distinguished former public official named Grover Cleveland. Mr. Trowbridge graduated from Yale College with the class of 1902, and from Yale Law School in 1905. After law school, he joined the law firm of Simpson, Thatcher and Bartlett in New York City, then served four years as assistant district attorney under the famous crusader William Travers Jerome, and after some years in private practice with his own firm, Trowbridge and Fox, became general counsel to Colgate & Co., a post in which he served for thirty years, retiring in 1946.

In 1909 he married Helen Fox and in 1922 the Trowbridge family became one of the founders of the Yelping Hill community. In part, due to Mr. Trowbridge's active participation in its affairs, the community has grown and prospered. He was also for many years a trustee of Vassar College.

Until his final illness struck in mid-February, Mr. Trowbridge was actively engaged as chairman preparing for the Sixtieth Reunion of the Yale class of 1902. He was noted among friends for his wide-ranging interests and knowledges, for his kindly wit, and his skill with rhymes. He had gone to school in Chicago with Burgess Johnson, and had something of his friend's uncanny skill with couplets."

On March 1, 1912, Mason Trowbridge was prevailed upon, once again, to act as Toastmaster at the annual banquet. His humor was timeless as the following excerpts illustrate:

"The committee has informed me that the other speakers would not take up much time, and that I was expected to do a good deal of the talking myself. The first thing, however, that met my eye on coming into the hotel, was Walter Freeman carrying a large package of manuscript. I at once cut half an hour from my prepared remarks. In a moment Noel (Fox) came in with a suitcase, and I took off another hour and a half. I then took the precaution to ask the head porter if he had noticed anything in Clinton Ivins' hand when he arrived. He said, 'I didn't see anything in his hand, but he brought a trunk with him.' I therefore hasten to introduce the speakers without more ado, and call on the representative of the great body of associates, Walter Freeman."

..."The business management of the Fox Family News has asked me to make an announcement: In order to increase its subscription list it makes the following offer. To anyone procuring one new subscription, it will give as a premium one of Dr. Howard Fox's medical pamphlets. Anyone procuring five subscriptions will be given a copy of Prof. Charles Fox's, Ph.D. thesis on "The Omission of the Auxiliaries Haben and Sein in Old and Middle German. Anyone producing twenty-five new subscribers will be given his choice, suitably framed in gilt for hanging in a drawingroom, of anyone of the colored plates in Dr. Fox's album of Skin Diseases. Noel will now give us the second of the ninety-nine instalments of the military history of the family."

CLINTON FOX IVINS (1887-1975)
and
MARGUERITE C. IVINS (1889-1975)

by Sidney C. Moody, Jr.

Moses probably never slyly dropped a phrase or two of Latin into a toast as he saluted his people over a campfire. One doubts that Brigham Young ever combined Princeton University, his wife, Anne Hutchinson, the Democratic Party and the Mexican Border Campaign in one monologue that almost invariably also included an ungrammatical "he don't."

But Clinton Fox Ivins was, nonetheless, a patriarch. Not just because he survived a long and useful life of 87 years which survival, alone, commanded and deserved respect. He LOOKED like one, albeit a 20th century version. His eyes were clear and direct (as was his vision), the moustache a just right bristle to go with a straightforward nose. But his invariable boutonniere and preference for the proper word instead of the colloquial marked him from another era. He was an Edwardian remnant still thriving in an age of hip-huggers. He was at home in both worlds, sartorially, intellectually, in awareness and participation.

It was his sense of time and its passage, the slow blending of one generation into another, his understanding that we all go back as well as forward, that made his interest in his own family so important a part of his life. His middle name was Fox, and this was not unimportant to him.

He was never better than when he donned his green tie with the silver and orange foxes and set off for another convocation of the clan. He was back with his people, among whom he stood as a tangible link of that elusive time. Of course his shirt may have been pink, his jacket yellow, his pants brown and his lapel flower blue. The raiment of many colors was chosen with great deliberation. It was just that he was color blind. But the nattiness showed he cared, and that was why he fitted so well the role of head of the clan. He was custodian of what Foxes had been, were and would be. Whether some may not have cared as much as he was immaterial to him. He knew his duty. Like an indulgent old sheep dog he would chivvy the others along, gently reminding them that they were members of a flock and that this they should never forget.

Every old trunk or seemingly worthless heirloom was worthy because it was emblamatic of heritage. The need for such things he saw clearly.

He was not the most practical man in many things. If he didn't always recognize this, his wife, Marguerite, was at his side for 58 years to remind him. He bore this well, for he knew the greater secret all the while and that whatever imprecisions he committed were but immaterial sidetracks. Pete, as he was known to her, or Gump, as he was known to his grandchildren, never forgot that life and the living of it were what was important and had to be translated to others who might have lost sight of this in an overconcern for trifling details that distracted one from the fundamental.

He kept spring water in an old gin bottle in the refrigerator and once poured some guests three rounds of martinis mixed of vermouth and H20 without a flicker of embarrassment. The convivality what what mattered, not the stimulant. Yet he would worry for months about the bestowing of ancient books that belonged to an extinct and distant Fox because this was a matter of family, and in such concerns one could not be too precise.

In business, his was a varied career. He graduated from Princeton in 1909 and subsequently held every available position in the class hierarchy. (The one color he felt quite confident about and never -- well, almost never -- failed to recognize was orange.) He chased Pancho Villa on the Border with about as much success as he did riches in various jobs with Pathescope Company of America, Type Founders and Daystrom Corporation. But he provided well for his family, and that, not the ups and downs, was what mattered.

If he was something of a dreamer and idealist, there was always Marguerite to keep at least one of his feet on the ground with an "Oh, Pete" which might mean everything from a summons to dinner to a stern reminder from the back seat that the traffic light had turned green. The fact that it took five long years for her to nudge him from engagement to the altar was no reflection on the love and affection that bound him and his girl from Bergen Point, a place she accepted philosophically was later known as Bayonne, New Jersey. If they did not always recognize it, they were a necessary complement to each other. He the man who could stop to sniff a flower, she the woman to remind him they had a plane to catch. When he died in March after a slow decline into far old age, she recognized deep inside that her life's work was done and went to join him less than three months later.

Theirs is a quintesentially human love story. Even more, it was a life story. Gump always knew this. That was why he was a patriarch.

The following, written by M. Edward White, appeared in Assembly, the West Point magazine.

Charles and Vivian Ivins died September 6, 1980 at Homestead, Florida. They were inurned in the columbarium at Arlington Cemetery in a service attended by family members and classmates.

Charles Fox Ivins was born September 23, 1898 in Plainfield, N.J. of DeWitt Clinton Ivins and Louise Fox Ivins. He graduated from Phillips Andover Academy in 1917 and from USMA in June, 1920. While at the Infantry School, Fort Benning, Georgia, he was smitten with the beauty and charm of Vivian Alice Marie Ferrandou, whom he married on February 9, 1922. They leave two sons, Richard and Peter, four grandchildren, and one great-grandchild.

Charlie advanced through the grades to Colonel in 1942. He earned a CR in G3 Sect Repl & Sch Comd 42-46 and an LM as Ch Cent Exch Yokohama 47-51. He retired in 1954 to his lime grove in Homestead, and served as manager of the State Avacado and Lime Commission. He was president of the Rotary Club and a Lay Reader in the Episcopal Church. He wrote a very witty and informative book about life in the Philippines during his duty there in the late Twenties. This book is available at USMA.

In 1969, Charlie and Vivian sold their lime grove and hacienda to a wealthy Cuban and moved to Sarasota, Florida. They maintained their summer home in Highlands, N.C. and wintered in Sarasota - the best of both worlds. They also traveled considerably until the summer fo 1977 when Charlie was told that he probably wouldn't see the New Year due to cancer to the pancreas. Both Vivian and Charlie faced this sentence with courage, dignity and prudence. He arranged their affairs to her benefit, and he even had a pacemaker implanted to correct a low heart rate. Miraculously, his health stabilized and the responsibly diagnosed cancer went into remission.

Uncle Charlie was an extremely bright and perceptive person. He was very well educated at Andover and West Point. To his eighty-second year, he never lost his curiosity and interest in the physical and intellectual world around him. In his wide travels, he always went out among the natives and sampled, observed, and discussed their culture, customs, politics ... and cuisine. He was not one to sit in the American Bar. He was one of the best informed people on an enormous variety of subjects that I have ever known. Though he was plagued by increasing deafness during his last fifteen years, Charlie continued to take Vivian to plays, lectures, and even operas! He volunteered as a driver delivering meals and providing personal contact to elderly shut-ins through the Sarasota Meals-on-Wheels program. He "golfed" and Vivian "bridged", for both understood the desirability of some apartness in the ideal togetherness. In my lengthy observation, Charlie was ever the loving, patient, and considerate husband.

In the spring of 1980, Charlie and Vivian were advised to give up their Sarasota apartment for a retirement/nursing home type of care due to Aunt Vivian's advancing hardening of the arteries and Uncle Charlie's also delicate health. They moved to such a facility in Homestead, Florida near their son, Richard, but it soon became clear that this arrangement compromised what they both cherished--their togetherness and their independence.

Aunt Vivian had been gently reared in New Orleans among many later generation French relatives from both her mother's de Gruy family and her father's Ferrandou family. As the eldest of five girls, she was somewhat a princess. However, the nursing home, in which she was necessarily confined, was no place for a princess. In his last letter Charlie wrote, "Vivian has been inexpressibly dear to me for nearly sixty years, and the thought that we would both be living in institutions is not to be borne."

When the extremity of her confusion and increasing senility led her to prevail repeatedly on Charlie to "take me out of here," or "take me home," a home which no longer existed, one can understand his sad torment. A sensitive and loving man, he knew there was nothing he could do to help her situation or ease her suffering. He realized his own time was short; his cancer had resurged. He could not bear to leave her in such distress and circumstance. After anguish that is difficult to imagine, he took the "Glorious Peanut", his Princess, Home with him forever. I know that it was an act of love and one of enormous courage. Certainly Charlie saw it as his final act of duty.

a loving nephew,

M.E.W.

BORN: 1909 Wilmington, Delaware (?)

DIED: 11 March 1962 Honolulu, Hawaii

MARRIED: Mary Alice Cornell Barnes

Herbert Moore Fox lived in the Hawaiian Islands for about 20 years with his wife, Mary, and had acted as a Consulting Engineer on airport projects.

Herbert's early days were spent in Wilmington where his father, Herbert Wright Fox (son of Charles J. Fox), was an official of the DuPont Company. He attended the University of Delaware and worked as a mining engineer in Mexico and the West.

Coming to Honolulu, Herb and his wife entered into the life of the community and he became an expert surfboard rider and a student of Polynesian lore. He owned a beautiful home on the slopes of Diamond Head, and was a member of the Outrigger Club. He left no children. Marguerite and Clinton Ivins on visits to Hawaii were entertained by them and found Herbert very much interested in his family connections and the affairs of our Society. A progressive illness over the last few years had caused him to lessen his activities and death finally overtook him in March 1962.

Mrs. Fox moved to Australia, address unknown.
